

Studio City – February 2023

Mitchell Kallick has been named the Girls' Volleyball Program Head at Harvard-Westlake.

Kallick is currently the Director of Recruiting and Technical Director at City Volleyball club, where in addition to coaching their elite club teams, he oversees talent evaluation and acquisition and coordinates college recruitment and placement.

Kallick has an extensive background in collegiate coaching, working as an assistant coach at NYU, Tennessee, Cal State Fullerton, Maryland and Central Michigan. He was the Head Coach at the University of Hartford from 2015-18. After his stint at Hartford, he moved West to work in the elite club scene in So. Cal and as a private college recruiting consultant.

As a collegiate student-athlete, he was a middle hitter and was inducted into the Hall-of-Fame as the all-time kills leader at NYU, where he completed a bachelor's degree in history.

"We are extremely excited to welcome Mitch to Harvard-Westlake to lead our girls' volleyball program," said Terry Barnum, Head of Athletics. "He is very well connected in the LA club volleyball world and has a passion for the game and player development that is contagious, and I can't wait for him to start working with our athletes."

"I'm so grateful for the opportunity to join Harvard-Westlake and lead the Girls' Volleyball program," said Kallick. "Harvard-Westlake is a special place with a well-earned reputation for academic and athletic excellence. I am honored to accept the opportunity to continue this tradition and take the volleyball program to the next level."

Kallick begins his work at Harvard-Westlake immediately.
